TEXT : People's occupations

The work of the women is to fetch water, clean the room or the house, cook the food, weave lamba in their looms, or plait mats which they sell or store up for special occasions such as a family funeral or wedding. Some are very quick and ingenuous in their household art.

Serving out the cooked rice at meal time is the mother's job, but in her absence, the female members of the family take it in turn. They are very particular, however in this matter: they refuse to do more than their share.

The men do outdoor work, attending to their rice fields, planting sweet potatoes, cassava… But the "pater-familias" delights in spending his day looking after his oxen, which are his "peculiar treasure" as they graze in the hollows.

John H. Haile.
